A LIST OF CURES.

Lieut. W. PARDOE, OF HIS MAJESTY'S GUN VESSEL FEARLESS.

SIR,—It is with infinite satisfaction I acknowledge the excellence of your Botanical Syrup, which has entirely relieved me from the most EXCRUCIATING RHEUMATIC PAINS AND CONTRACTION OF THE JOINTS, which I have been afflicted with upwards of ten months.—Be assured I shall recommend your valuable medicine to the utmost of my power.

I remain, SIR, your very obedient humble Servant,

LIEUT. W. PARDOE, Plymouth Dock, July 31, 1800.

To DOCTOR BRODUM, London.

The following case was received by Mr Thomas White, Master of the Academy, COLCHES-TER, from a respectable gentleman, who was recommended to take Dr. BRODUM'S Medicines by Mr. J. COOPER, Gentleman Farmer, at Levington, near Ipswich, who was himself radically cured by taking the BOTANICAL SYRUP, with a request from the Patient for its immediate Publication.

A Gentleman who is induced from his connections with medical men, to refrain inserting his name and address, wishes from the purest motives of philanthropy, that his case may be made known to every asthmatic person in the kingdom.

For 18 years he had been severely afflicted with an asthma, that every winter rendered his life very uncomfortable; the cough attendant on his complaint, generally attacked him at the beginning of every winter, and continued till the warm weather of the ensuing summer arrived, and so violent and alarming were its spasmodic effects, that many times it has thrown him down on the floor, deprived of all sensibility, and to all human appearance of life; by the advice of Mr. Cooper, above mentioned, he waited on Dr. Brodum, took 3 bottles of his NERVOUS CORDIAL, to which alone he attributes the blessings of a perfect cure, having passed through the late winter, with scarcely a memento of his old troublesome companion, which had not given him a weeks respite in 18 preceding winters.

June 2, 1801.

Mrs. Jewell, Linen-Draper, Brompton, near Chatham, was afflicted six years with a complication of disorders, which baffled the skill of several persons of the profession; her body was swelled in a violent manner, so much as to be called by some the dropsy, some a bilious complaint, &c. her legs were in such a situation as at the ankles to spread over the shoes at times; she was afraid, from an oppression in her breast, of being choaked for want of breath. In this condition her life became a burthen, being hopeless of any relief from medicine, but fortunately applying to Dr. Brodum, was perfectly recovered by his Nervous Cordial. Any person questioning the authenticity of the above, on application, or by letter, (post paid) may receive full satisfaction.

A REMARKABLE CASE.

SIR,—In consequence of the great benefit which I have experienced by taking your BOTANICAL SYRUP and NERVOUS CORDIAL, I think it but just to request you to publish my case, for the benefit of those who may labour under a similar complaint. I was afflicted for a length of time with a Dreadful Nervous Disorder, that affected me in an alarming degree, my body was also swelled in a manner that made my existence very miserable: I was advised by the faculty to try the country air, at a time when they could no longer prescribe to relieve me; this, I also did, but found no benefit; but by applying to you, Sir, and taking your medicines, I am quite restored to health and spirits. I am, Sir, your ever grateful humble servant,

MARY CASLAKE, Tallow-Chandler.

To Dr. BRODUM, No. 9, Albion-street, Black-friars.

SIR

Durham, June 16, 1801.

I feel infinite satisfaction in having permission to communicate to you a most surprising cure, effected by your truly invaluable RESTORATIVE NERVOUS CORDIAL, and think it would be doing an injustice to mankind and the public in general, to withhold the efficacy of so salutary and sovereign a medicine.

Mrs. Shirwood, late housekeeper at Windlestone Hall, in the vicinity of Durham, has been afflicted from the year 1792, with a long train of horrid nervous affections, attended with excruciating Pains in the Back and Stomach, Giddiness, Violent Headach, and extreme sickness, in short, her whole frame was so impaired, that it was with the greatest difficulty she could walk up or down stairs, and was often confined to her room for weeks together; her situation was so truly alarming, that she frequently was obliged to be supported to prevent her from falling; with the advice of medical men, she was induced to make a trial of your Nervous Cordial. She first took two small bottles, which afforded her a little relief; she then sent to me for a large bottle, and before she had taken the whole of it, was able to walk, without the least inconvenience, four or five miles. She is now upwards of 60 years of age, happily restored from pain and disease, to a better state of health than she has enjoyed for these ten years. Any person desirous of further information, may have every satisfaction by applying either by letter (post paid) or personally, to

DEAR SIR,

IT is a duty I owe you and the Public, to acknowledge the benefit I have received from your invaluable Nervous Cordial.—About eight years ago, from grief, occasioned by the loss of a dear friend, my frame received such a shock, that ever since I have been afflicted with a violent NERVOUS COMPLAINT, which affecting the optic nerve of my eye, made it difficult for me to proceed in my profession: indeed, I was under apprehensions of blindness, but hearing the good effects some friends had experienced from your Nervous Cordial and Botanical Syrup, I was induced to make trial, and it is with pleasure and gratitude I add, I am now recovered, and my sight is so much restored, that I can paint a miniature of the smallest size, without the least inconvenience. I am Your humble Servant,

No. 39, Devonshire-street,
Portland Place.

RICHARD COLLINS,

Miniature Painter to his Majesty.

Copy of a Letter to Richard Graves, (Brother to Admiral Sir Thomas Graves) Captain in the Royal Navy. Exeter, Devon.

Sir, Agreeable to your request, I have the honour and pleasure to inform you that I am entirely recovered from my late illness. Although too much praise cannot be ascribed to Dr. Brodum's medicines, in working so wonderful a cure in so short a period, still I have you to thank, Sir, for your obliging condescension in answering my first letter in so gentleman-like manner, and look on you as the principal cause that my health is restored; for had I not been encouraged by you, Sir, to trust myself under Dr. Brodum's care, I should, to this moment, have laboured under the dreadful disorder. I can assure you, it is not in my power to do justice to Dr. Brodum's merit; as to his medicines, they are most excellent. I will leave you to judge, that after being afflicted for upwards of six years, under so dreadful a scorbutic complaint, as to occasion large tumors in my legs and several parts of my body, to deprive me of hearing and nearly my sight, my nerves affected almost to madness, for which I was under the care of some of the most eminent of the faculty, at an expence of upwards of three hundred pounds, without receiving a shadow of benefit, nay, I found my disorder increase under their hands; to be cured by Dr. Brodum in less than six weeks, appears to me little short of a miracle; his skill as a physician, and his treatment as a gentleman, shall ever be remembered by me with gratitude never to be erased. I shall use my utmost assiduity to recommend Dr. Brodum's medicine to my brother officers. I am, with the utmost esteem, your obedient servant,
Manchester-square, Dec. 26, 1797. CHARLES HANBY.

The Ship Mary, of St. John's Canada.

Capt. Thomas Oliver, Master of the Mary, of St. John's, Canada, solemnly declares that himself received a deal of benefit from Dr. Brodum's Nervous Cordial; likewise his Wife Mary Ann Oliver, was almost reduced to death's door, and was perfectly cured by taking Dr. Brodum's Nervous Cordial, after being given over by all the able Physicians in the Country: likewise several of the inhabitants of the island have received great benefit from the above Medicines.

Witness my hand,

May the 15th, 1800.

Robert Raikes, Esq. (Founder of the Sunday Schools) of Gloucester, will testify the excellence of Dr. Brodum's Botanical Syrup and Nervous Cordial.

A merchant at Exeter, who had a violent inflammation in his blood, which broke out all over his body in scorbutic blotches, and occasioned a defect of sight, cured by the Botanical Syrup and Nervous Cordial.

Witness, John Coward, Exeter.

I have long known the gentleman intimately, and I know the above case to be true. CHAPMAN JVES, Coltishall, near Norwich.

For the excellent CHARACTER of this Work, see the different Reviews. It is not alone that the first medical men of England have acknowledged the excellence of Dr. Brodum's Botanical Syrup and Nervous Cordial, but also the first Professors of the University of Copenhagen have attested the same in letters to the Doctor. They have analyzed the Medicine, and given praise to the Doctor's merit, for inventing so great a Restorative and Purifier for the Human Frame, viz.

WINSLOW, Professor of Anatomy ; | CALLISON, Professor ;
TODE, Prof. of the Univ. of Physicians ; | MANDHAY, Prof. of Chemistry.

I certify that the above is signed and sealed by Professor Winslow, of the City of Copenhagen. Witness my hand and seal, at Copenhagen, this 30th day of June, 1799.

LORD ROBERT STEP. FITZGERALD,

His Majesty's Envoy Extraordinary at the Court of Denmark.

"I hereby certify, that I have printed Thirty Thousand of Dr. Brodum's Guide to Old Age, since its first publication. J. W. MYERS."

I acknowledge that my late brother, J. W. Myers, printed for Dr. Brodum thirty thousand volumes, called the "Guide to Old Age" and to which my late brother signed his name. Witness my hand this 10th of January, 1801.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS ON NATURE.

THE first and principal duty of a physician is, the attaining the art of distinguishing the cause of the disorder, particularly those that are most general and fatal in the district of his practice. The knowledge of the different qualities of medicines, should likewise be his peculiar care, since without this important information, it is impossible for him to be able to successfully relieve the various disorders incident to the human frame. That DR. BRODUM has particularly made these two grand objects his study, is amply confirmed by the astonishing success that has attended the administration of his BOTANICAL SYRUP and NERVOUS CORDIAL.—Several of the most dire calamities of human nature having subsided by their adoption, and the constitution attained an energy and power positively beyond the expectation of the most sanguine.

ON NERVOUS DISORDERS.

The animal spirits being the principal seat of knowledge, gives immediate judgment between pain and pleasure; the medium of seeing, hearing, tasting, smelling, and feeling. But the mind, or animal spirits, can conceive either fear, grief, joy, &c. and without imbibing it from these organs.

When one person infects another, it must be carried to the prime seat of knowledge, by some one of the senses. Thus when any hurt, surprise, infection, &c. reaches the animal spirits, the antipathy of the nerves is evident from the violent irritation produced in every muscle and artery of the frame. This demonstrates that the nerves are immediately under the government of the mind, and their surprising facility of action is elucidated by the quickness with which we catch a flying ball, or guard our heads from an impending blow. That the mind is in all these cases directing the action of the nerves, is evidently conspicuous from their wonderful energetic and instantaneous operation.

Having thus shewn the nerves to be under the immediate guidance and influence of the mind, I shall proceed to remark, that all disorders ranked under the appellation of nervous complaints, are the principal sources of human misery, in the total loss or suspension of health. To investigate the source of the numerous calamities that are ranked under the above head, would far exceed the limits of a work of this description, suffice it therefore to observe, that none are more justly to be deplored than the above, since they are fraught with the most dangerous consequences to the valetudinarian, except the party is so fortunate as to be recommended to Dr. BRODUM'S NERVOUS CORDIAL, a preparation unexampled for its efficacy in the annals of medicine. Its success is singularly extraordinary in all delicate, weakly, and relaxed constitutions, lowness of spirits, hypochondriac, horrors, tremblings, weakness of sight, loss of memory, impaired vigour, tabes dorsalis, nervous consumptions, and disorders arising from a course of intemperance, or a disregard to those principles requisite to be adopted in the preservation of health. Every part of his Majesty's dominions has experienced incontestable testimonies of the efficacy of this invaluable medicine, nor has its justly-acquired fame failed to extend to the most remote parts of the universe, particularly to the East and West Indies, America, &c.

The admirable manner in which it braces and attenuates the human system, causes it to give astonishing vigour to the functions of life, and to be at this day the most noble remedy extant, for the effectual cure of those disorders recorded in these pages of authentic information. The grave has lost many a victim, and the health of thousands been preserved to extreme old age, through the fortunate discovery of this invaluable medicine.

The multiplicity of disorders incorporated into the system by the dissipation of youth, is a lamentable truth, especially when we reflect that our own imprudences produce the subsequent calamities of our life. The strongest and most vigorous constitutions have frequently been destroyed beyond redemption by those imprudent practices; yet let not the invalid despair, since there exists a remedy that has completely recovered the most emaciated, and that at an æra when hope had almost entirely forsaken the supposed victim of his own destruction.

This unparalleled restorative is equally efficacious in removing the various weaknesses incident to the fair sex; so that it may be said to be the most invaluable companion to the toilet that ever was discovered in any age or country.

Persons enervated by too long a residence in warm climates, the immoderate use of spiritous liquors, tea, or coffee, the languor arising from intense study, have all experienced its salutary effects on the constitution. In a word, it removes the head-ach, invigorates the spirits, and gives a tone of vigour to the animal life, that is pregnant with the first of comforts to society at large—the never too much to be estimated blessing of health.

The connection between the mind and body admits not of any dispute; it is obvious in the sensations of pain and pleasure, which we experience from a review of external objects, and our attempting to escape the former, or improve the latter, is an unanswerable argument in favour of this intimate, though temporary union. These ardent impressions we doubtless derive from divine Providence, to define or investigate which is not within the province of human nature. To attempt it, would be an act of the most absurd and dangerous temerity of which mankind could be guilty. The secrets of the Almighty should be sacred; his mysteries inviolable.

The real happiness of man was one of the most important ends of the creation; and, as all that the earth produces was made for his use and benefit, it is a duty incumbent on us to advert to every innocent means of enjoyment, and to shield ourselves from those evils that may be happily avoided, by a display of the resolution which we are invested by nature for our manifest preservation.

The potent power of medicine, is one of the greatest blessings that has ever been discovered for our mental and our corporeal repose; for, when sickness affects the body, the mind is weakened in proportion to the extent of the complaint.

If the space allotted for repose is disturbed by unpleasant dreams, who would not exert every effort in his power to render them more calm and tranquil? and as the fancy is particularly alert, during this temporary suspension of the more active powers of life, the immediate object of our care, should be to have our sleep accompanied with visions, that would, when the spells of Morpheus had subsided, afford us a pleasing and agreeable retrospection. From these remarks on sleep, this inference may be drawn in more active life, should the invalid neglect to apply in time, when afflicted with any of the disorders eradicated by DR. BRODUM'S BOTANICAL SYRUP and NERVOUS CORDIAL, he will deserve to remain as unpitied as he who neglects to administer to his own comfort in the endeavouring to obtain a placid and undisturbed repose. The person who is obstinate when the renovation of his health is in contemplation, and will not believe the representations of his friends, when speaking from confirmed experience,—deserves not to partake of those comforts which the re-establishment of the system would infallibly produce.

Extract of a letter from Mr. Cooper, a very respectable Gentleman Farmer, at Lewington, near Ipswich, to Mr. T. White, Master of the Academy at Colchester.

Dear Sir,

June 2, 1801.

When you write to Dr. Brodum, pray inform him, that I have received from his Medicines, all the benefit my most sanguine expectations could lead me to look for, or, my most earnest wishes could induce me to hope. My case was an irruption on my face, of the most virulent nature, that was not merely extremely troublesome, but also rendered me excessively low spirited and ill. I strictly followed the rules laid down in the Doctor's publication, and was in a short time most radically cured; it is now nearly two years since I took the Medicines, and have never since had the slightest return of my troublesome disorder. I feel it a duty which I owe to the community (and I am sure your just mode of thinking will induce you to join in the sentiment) that the Doctor should be at liberty to make this case public, for the benefit of suffering individuals; being myself infinitely above regarding any remarks that may be made on it by the insolent, the invidious, or the incredulous.

Your's sincerely, J. COOPER.

SIR,

London, Nov. 1, 1799.

IT is but justice I should inform you that during my last voyage from England to the West-Indies I was very much troubled with a BILIOUS COMPLAINT, which affected me to an alarming degree, fortunately a passenger of mine had some of your Nervous Cordial on board, and was persuaded by him to make trial of a bottle, which I did, and to my utter astonishment found almost instantaneous relief, and have never since been troubled with the above complaint; as such I shall recommend your Medicines to all my friends, both in England and the West-Indies.

I am, Sir, your truly obliged humble Servant, W. BUTLER.

MARRIAGE AND SOCIAL HAPPINESS.

How many men, to all appearance in the prime of life, who have not yet arrived at the age of 25 years, are rendered miserable to themselves and useless to the great chain of society, which they have either brought on themselves, or, by the force of bad example, are given up to a SECRET VICE; the consequence is, that their MIND as well as BODY is debilitated; to those the Nervous Cordial is recommended, and for which Dr. Brodum obtained HIS MAJESTY'S ROYAL LETTERS PATENT; it will protect them from the infirmities of old age and a wretched dissolution. Amidst the agonizing reflections of conscious guilt, how many are there of both sexes, that are deterred from entering into a married state, by infirmities which delicacy forbids them to disclose; and those are not a few, who being already married, are rendered miserable for want of those tender pleasures of mutual love, without which happiness this state is at least very precarious. The BOTANICAL SYRUP and NERVOUS CORDIAL have both stood the test of the first Medical Men in England, and the greatest Professors in Physic of the present age; and for which his Majesty granted his Royal Letters Patent; thus sanctioned, Dr. Brodum is bold in holding forth to the world the above two unrivalled Medicines, which is the fruit of close and studious application, for upwards of 28 years. All kinds of DEBILITY, whether arising from the HABITS of SCHOOL BOYS, or the INDULGENCE of MATURE AGE, which render men miserable, and makes them unfit to enjoy the Blessings of Society, and more so that of the married state, the BOTANICAL SYRUP will remove; the good effects of which thousands have experienced and numbers have testified.
